ACC seeks day care referendum

Three hundred students are needed for an open meeting of the Students' Society tomorrow at 1 pm to discuss the issue of day care at McGill. The meeting, called by the Alliance for Child care (ACC) will determine whether or not McGill students favor the establishment of permanent day care facilities to handle student, staff, and community children.

A petition, which has been circulated for the past few days, will also be discussed. The petition calls for the Students' Society to appropriate the sum of one dollar from each student's fees, with the proviso that each student can decide at registration whether he is willing to have this sum deducted from his fees or not.

The ACC also calls for a parent-controlled day care centre, so that parents rather than University bureaucrats can supervise operations.

The petition also includes a demand requiring the proposed McGill Day Care Co-op (MDCC) to be run on a non-profit basis, thus permitting parents to pay on a sliding scale basis.

Finally, the petition calls for an educational program to be started which will concentrate on issues such as family life, health problems, the oppression of women, and provincial responsibility for the provision of day care services in Quebec.

The ACC, with the cooperation of the McGill Hillel Student's Society, has been operating an interim day care centre on the third floor of Hillel. Hillel is not controlled by the McGill Administration, and therefore is not affected by an injunction the administration took out two weeks ago forbidding the establishment of day care services on McGill property.

The ACC strongly urges all members of the McGill community who favor the establishment of day care for McGill students and workers to attend tomorrow's meeting.

Branover speaks on Soviet Jewry

"Demonstrations would not be that bad if people did not believe so strongly in them. There are other things of higher priority that are definitely useful in aiding Soviet Jews." This was one of the main points dwelt upon by Professor Herman Branover, former member of the Institute of Physics, Latvian Academy of Sciences, in a forty minute discussion held at Hillel House yesterday afternoon.

A group of fifty were on hand to listen to and later question the speaker, a resident of Israel since October, 1972.

Professor Branover expanded on his argument by presenting four alternatives to demonstrations:

- tourists must promote Jewish spirit when visiting Russia by bringing records and books, and especially by word of mouth
- American and Canadian radio stations should broadcast special programs for Jews in Russia
- material help is necessary to aid visa applicants
- to show that we are using the freedom here that is strived for in Russia, Jews should not assimilate.

The other point the Professor discussed was the problem of the salvation of the Jewish spirit. According to him, there is no danger to the safety of Soviet Jews as long as their Jewishness is not openly expressed. "Jews can reach any position (except high government office) as long as their actions don't conflict with Russian government policy". For this reason according to Branover, all Jews must be allowed to emigrate, or they cannot survive as Jews.

Professor Branover felt that the struggle for the right to emigrate is not as important at this time as the struggle of those Jews who are not psychologically prepared to leave. This is where the promotion of the Jewish culture comes in.

Professor Branover backed up his arguments with a number of statistics. Out of 3 million Soviet Jews, 30,000 emigrated last year, bringing the total number of emigres to 60,000. 500,000 more are prepared to leave, if allowed.

He went on to say that the priority should be placed on emigres who can bring "a new wave of idealism" to Israel. The Israelis, however, are not taking care of "spiritual absorption", and as a result Soviet Jews arriving in Israel are writing "bad, disheartening letters" back to their friends and relatives in the USSR.

In reference to the recently imposed exit tax, Professor Branover felt that the only chance of changing it lay in the hope that the American Jackson Amendment, a bill that promises "most favoured nation status" to those countries practicing a free emigration policy, will be passed. However, he also stated that the tax "doesn't amount to so much money", and that people in "the free world" can easily afford to send parcels, whose value in the Soviet Union far exceed their worth here. Unfortunately, Professor Branover lamented, "nobody seems to be interested in giving material aid."

ANAI'S NIN, novelist, diarist, and Henry Miller's pen pal, will speak Wednesday, March 7 at 8 pm in Leacock 132 on the subject of "Women in Literature".
